

How to create a fully dynamic user form in Excel using a single macro [full tutorial + free download ...] In this video we create a fully dynamic user form for our project using a macro that will only read values from the table and should not be changed. We have a table that contains the company names that we use to create the custom forms, but we also use Excel to enter the data. Each company has two columns, in that column we have several rows associated with companies that have more than one column in that company.
