To examine the relationship between the development of age-related strength and endurance impairments and the effect of the type of protein (whey versus casein) and the presence or absence of enzymatic supplements on older persons' strength and endurance. A cohort of 150 men and women (age, 66-95 years) were followed for a period of 10 months, during which they

performed a series of timed walking, stair-climbing, and self-paced stair-climbing tests. The subjects also reported their consumption of protein (6-week food records). A representative subset of subjects were supplemented with protein and/or creatine. The "natural" course of strength and endurance with advancing age was characterized by a gradual loss of strength and endurance, but with no reduction in the rate of decline. However, supplementation of either protein type with or without supplementation with creatine or carbohydrase resulted in a reduction in the rate of decline of strength and endurance. Dietary protein had a more pronounced effect than dietary creatine. The change in functional status with age was associated with the rate of change in a measure of lean tissue (muscle mass). Muscle mass may be a useful measure for detecting possible intervention trials. The present invention is directed to optical systems and devices for imaging, projecting, reflecting, diffracting, or otherwise manipulating, spatial-mode division multiplexed (SMD) optical beams of the type produced by a spatial light modulator (SLM) in an SLM-based imager or projector. It is specifically directed to such optical systems and devices for the purpose of mixing the different spatial modes produced by the SLM into a desired single spatial mode, for example, in order to produce an SLM output beam suitable

Magic Recovery Professional is a software utility whose purpose is to aid individuals in recovering damaged, deleted, corrupted or lost data and in viewing disk information. Surprise-free setup and well-organized UI The installation process is a piece of cake, as it does not offer to download any third-party products and it is over in a jiffy. Once you are done with it, you are met with pretty well-structured and simple interface, as it encloses a menu bar, some buttons and a few panes in which to display a folder structure and a list of recovered items. In addition to that, Help contents are integrated. As a consequence, both beginners and highly experienced people can handle it without facing any kind of difficulty. Details you can bring up This program enables you to recovery any type of file, from your hard drive, as well as external data devices and image drives, and you can view information pertaining to them, such as file system type, total size and bytes in a sector. In addition to that, you can also view details about your system, such as number of processor, CPU name and identifier, display resolution, installed RAM, OS version and location. Specify cluster range and save the list of recovered items It is possible to scan any drive, with the help of a wizard, so that you can be guided every step of the way, thus making sure that anybody can retrieve their items. A search function can be used in order to find items faster, and you can also look up a specified cluster range. Results are going to be listed in the main window along with information such as name, size, date modified, cluster, condition, file type and created time and date. You can arrange them according to name, date, size or format, and you can save the list as a TXT to the hard drive.

Conclusion To wrap it up, Magic Recovery Professional is a pretty efficient piece of software when it comes to retrieving lost, deleted, damaged or corrupted items from any kind of drive. The interface is intuitive although not quite appealing, the response time is good, and surprisingly enough, the amount of resources required is quite low.
