Saturday, 6 May 2017 Don't let the bags fool you I've been looking a little bit of shop-till-you-drop lately, having been enjoying the fatty spring sunshine and wanting to indulge in bags and shoes, so have been busy in HMV and Topshop. As I was browsing in Topshop this morning, I looked at a very pretty cloud bag that was tied round the handle and the thought popped into my head: "I can do that!". It was also clearly very light, so I didn't want a big industrial kind of bag that was going to be heavy and give my arms a workout, so made myself a few bags out of old plastic water bottles. I didn't quite want to make all of them, so started to make them a little less fancy. At first, I just made them by cutting a bag off the bottom and then tying a knot on the handle, just like these: I think these are cool but I decided to do something a bit neater with these two. As you can see, I cut a little round square off the top of the plastic water bottle so that I could then turn it into a bag. You can see the paint on the bottles is quite thin and I tried to keep the shapes of the bottles, but ended up with something that looks a bit messy. At the moment I'm trying to add a bit more to the look of these, but I'm not quite sure how to do that. I think if I painted the bags again then they would look more like the first two bags. I've found that it's better to wrap a bit of cloth round my wrist and twist the top and the bottom together and then tie it off with a knot. I think this gives the bags more life. They work better for bags with a lot of stuff in them. I think they
