Renal ischemia/reperfusion (I/R) injury has been recognized as the most important factor in acute renal failure. The present study was designed to evaluate the renal protective effects of the combination of L-arginine and α -tocopherol (L-ArG) against renal I/R injury in rats. Renal I/R injury was induced by 60 min of bilateral renal pedicle occlusion followed by 24 h of reperfusion. L-ArG (50 mg/kg) and α -tocopherol (50 mg/kg) were injected intravenously immediately after the ischemic period. L-ArG administration significantly improved renal dysfunction induced by renal I/R injury and the combination of L-ArG and α -tocopherol further enhanced its protective effect in a synergistic manner. The combination of L-ArG and α -tocopherol prevented both the marked elevation of blood urea nitrogen (BUN) and creatinine levels in the blood and reduced the levels of blood lipids and renal histopathological changes induced by renal I/R injury. The combination of L-ArG and α -tocopherol also reduced the activities of renal xanthine oxidase (XO) and xanthine dehydrogenase (XD), which are related to the synthesis of free radicals. These findings suggest that the combination of L-ArG and α -tocopherol provides synergistic protection against renal I/R injury.
