Robert Swindells' book "Stone Cold" tells about a teenager living on the street. He details his life and street life experiences. According to the author, the book is based on real events. However, the story it tells is fictional. Despite the fact that the story seems banal, Swindells wrote it with special love and warmth. In the book you can find a description of life in the ghetto in Brooklyn, where the main action takes place. The author touches on various topics - social inequality, poverty, violence and racism. Despite the fact that the book is based on real events, it can still be considered fictional.
