Get the latest Windows applications and drivers with automatic updates through Windows Update. While Microsoft offers the option to download updates directly, this can be a time consuming and potentially dangerous task as well. But thanks to the free Windows 10 Update

Assistant, Windows 10 comes with a simple way to schedule updates to occur automatically. When you try to connect to your PC, Windows 10 will prompt you to update your software. This can take anywhere from a few minutes to a few hours, depending on how fast your PC is and whether there are any driver updates to be installed. The Update Assistant will take care of all of this for you in the background, so you can just go about your day. Click or tap the "Check for updates now" button at the top of the Update Assistant window. Windows will first check your system for the latest software updates available, including both new and pending updates. You can then optionally select updates that you want to install. If you do not have time to install them, you can just click "Cancel" and Windows will go ahead with the default updates. At any time, you can click the "Learn more" button to view the details of any pending updates. On the next screen, the bar on the left hand side shows which Windows updates are selected. Then you just have to click the "Install Updates" button. For each update, you'll have the option to "Install" or "Cancel". This window will provide a log of any installation issues. If everything went well, Windows will restart the PC and you'll be back at your desktop in no time. The AppBar is mainly a container for icon Badges - replace the old system tray in Windows 7, 8, and 8.1 for the new Windows 10 system tray. The icon badges are not only important for desktop themes, but some of them can be customized as well. Badges you add will act like indicators, even on mouse clicks or touch on the desktop. Q: Using an XElement Name="instanceField" Value as a parent element with LINQ-to-XML I have an XElement that I'm using with LINQ-to-XML to create a parent element. The LINQ-to-XML is below:

```
XElement parentElem = new XElement("fields", new XElement("instanceFields", from i in Fields //fields property select new XElement("field", new XAttribute("name",
                    i.Name), new XAttribute("value",
                    i.Data[0].ToString()) )))

However the XML that is being written is not doing what I would expect. The output looks like this:
