Q: BigQuery - How to create array of new columns using existing columns without using users in project? I have a table with few columns in it like 'id, start, end'. If I want to create new column (TOTAL) is it possible if I don't use the users' user_id in project? It would be great if the solution could be in BigQuery, since I have large dataset. A: BigQuery tables can have multiple columns with the same name. Something like: #standardSQL SELECT id, start, end, MAX(Total) OVER (PARTITION BY id) AS Total FROM `bigquery-public-data.stackoverflow.posts` It will give you a column called Total per id. You can also use the new array() function in BigQuery to create an array column. #standardSQL SELECT id, ARRAY(SELECT MAX(TOTAL) FROM `bigquery-public-data.stackoverflow.posts` WHERE id = id) AS Total FROM `bigquery-public-data.stackoverflow.posts` [Tissue engineering of the urinary bladder].
