A: One of the reasons why OneDrive doesn't have that much space is that OneDrive uses the terms "bytes" and "storage space" in different ways. Bytes are a unit of information and storage is where that information goes. So when you put 10,000,000,000 bytes on the hard drive, it's only about that much space on your computer that's being used. The other thing about bytes and storage is that you need to pay for something in order for Microsoft to store that amount of data. If they did store it all for free, they would have to buy a lot of extra hard drives (or space in the cloud) and they would not be able to offer you a monthly free plan. So even if you have a 10 gigabyte plan, it doesn't mean you get 10 gigabytes. It means that whatever amount of bytes you use, Microsoft gets a set monthly fee for storing them. Since they only get to store the data you use, it actually is pretty low, but it's not 0. If you're interested in learning more, it's a good idea to search for the words "Microsoft Cloud Storage" on Google or another search engine and read some of the results. This way, you can get some more information about how OneDrive works (and how it doesn't work). A: there is a maximum size to how much OneDrive can sync If you exceed a certain amount of data your quota will be reduced. This isn't a hard limit like you had with DropBox. * * For the full copyright and license information, please view the LICENSE * file that was distributed with this source code. */ /** * Loads the corresponding service of the Twig environment. * * @package symfony * @subpackage twig * @author Fabien Potencier * @version SVN: $Id: sfDoctrineExtension.class.php 18021 2010-05-08 15:11:27Z fabien $ */ class sfDoctrine
