BUCKET: "Raw file, here I come!" When talking about image quality, you're going to hear a lot about raw files, and you might think that just owning one and shooting in raw is the best thing since sliced bread. Please, do not take this advice from someone who has just achieved three majors in photography and is an avid practitioner of the "one size fits all" mentality. Your camera manufacturer supplies camera models with a preset number of raw file formats. That's fine and dandy for most people, because it means you're not burdened with the hassles

WELCOME ABOUT US Hello and welcome to Joseph's Ford! Inc. When we founded Joseph's Ford twenty years ago, we had one goal in mind. After more than a decade of success building quality homes in the Bridgewater-Raynham area, we decided to expand our business to southern Massachusetts and beyond! Since then, we've grown to become a Massachusetts-based construction and remodeling firm. By combining the best of two great local industries, we have become a progressive, innovative construction company with an unmatched reputation. Our founder, Joseph F. Nighswander, MS., PE, is a longstanding member of the industry. At one time, he was a registered architectural engineer and was trained in German Modernism, among other styles. Joseph founded Joseph's Ford in 1996 with a clear vision for the company. Along with the help of his team, he is constantly challenging the old ways of doing business and bringing in new ideas that will help the company thrive in the future. We have worked hard to maintain a friendly and professional environment. Throughout the years, we have received positive reviews and we want to share this with all of our customers. Heterogeneity in human platelet monoamine oxidase activity. Human platelets contain monoamine oxidase activity capable of metabolizing biogenic amines such as serotonin, catecholamines, and histamine. Because the differences in platelet monoamine oxidase activity between normal and cardiovascular disease patients are small, we attempted to resolve this heterogeneity within our samples by a combination of three techniques: (1) a new fluorescence-activated cell-sorting (FACS) method to determine the cell cycle phase of the sorted platelet population; (2) the application of the isoenzyme-selective inhibitors pargyline (an irreversible MAO-A) and deprenyl (an irreversible MAO-B), which enabled an assessment of the activities of each isoenzyme within the platelets; and (3) the effects of sympathomimetics, which are known to stimulate the activity of one isoenzyme. Each technique gave slightly different results, and therefore we conclude that, at least within the platelet samples studied, the activity of platelet MAO is not a uniform characteristic, and that the physiological role of the enzyme should be considered within this heterogeneity. [Role of p38 in the regulation of cell proliferation and apoptosis in human breast cancer]. To investigate the role of p38 in the regulation of cell proliferation and apoptosis of breast cancer. Human breast cancer MCF-7 cells were transfected with human wild-type p38alpha or kinase-inactive mutant p38alpha-K138A vector to construct the MCF-7/p38alpha and MCF-7/p38alpha-K138A stable cell lines, the proliferation of cells was detected by MTT assay, and the apoptosis of cells was detected by flow cytometry and Western blot. (1) The MCF-7/p38alpha cell proliferation was significantly increased, with the decrease of apoptosis, but the MCF-7/p38alpha-K138A cell proliferation was significantly decreased with the increase of apoptosis. The changes of apoptosis were induced by the inhibition of p38alpha kinase activity. (2) The expression of Bax and caspase-3 was upregulated, and the expression of Bcl-2 was downregulated, but p38alpha kinase activity had no influence on the regulation of Bax and caspase-3 expression, and Bcl-2 expression was upregulated and downregulated by the inhibition of p38alpha kinase activity. p38alpha kinase plays an important role in the regulation of MCF-7 cell proliferation and apoptosis through the regulation of Bax and caspase-3 and Bcl-2 expression. Chemical carcinogenesis is thought to result from an interaction between a chemical carcinogen or carcinogens and cellular macromolecules. Many investigations have been made on the relationship between carcinogen-DNA binding and carcinogenesis. However, it still remains enigmatic whether the carcinogen-DNA binding plays a critical role in carcinogenesis, and if it does, how it does. We designed to study the correlation between the induction of micronuclei and the carcinogen-DNA binding. Seven chemical carcinogens were chosen to study the relationship in vivo and in vitro. We observed that the carcinogen-DNA binding activity was inversely correlated with the induction of micronuclei, though the correlation was not very strong. The basis of this relationship is not yet known. We are now investigating the relationship between the formation of HPRT gene mutation and the binding of in vitro prepared carcinogens and mutagens. Hopefully we shall find out whether carcinogen-DNA binding
