Still is the same. The same designs, the same workings.” Hall and Cooper feel they have an obligation to their fans. On a recent morning, they showed me the back of Cooper’s iPhone, which has turned to a deep pink after sweating and sweating and sweating on hundreds of heavy-duty ball-bearing films. “Look at it,” Cooper said. “We’re so close to sweat. We put stuff on our skin. We’re so exposed.” Hall told me that she wakes early every morning at 3 a.m., perhaps because she feels so connected to her iPhone. Hall and Cooper will soon attempt to make a documentary about the world’s best-known designer of machetes, the Wukan chopping tool. Hall has accepted a position teaching at an English-language school in China, and Cooper will be helping to translate the documentary. “We will die from exhaustion,” Cooper said. If all goes well, Hall and Cooper plan to publish a book about their travels. So far, they have plans to visit Finland, Denmark, Scotland, the Czech Republic and, of course, other parts of China. “I want to tell people about the market in the new year,” Cooper said. “It would be nice to see snow again.” \*This article appears in the April 15, 2016 issue of New York Magazine.Q: Wamp: Excluding directory when using grep command I just started using the Wamp server on my mac. I'm trying to exclude a directory from a search using the following command: `$ grep -r -i ".h4" C:/Users/username/Desktop/test/*` How do I exclude just `C:\Users\username\Desktop\test\` with the grep command? A: Change the first directory wildcard to the directory you want to exclude. `$ grep -r -i ".h4" C`

The present invention relates to a gas sensor used in an air-fuel ratio control system for a catalytic converter or the like of an automotive internal combustion engine, and more particularly to a gas sensor having a heat release structure using a bimetallic member as a temperature change detecting mechanism. In a gas sensor for detecting a concentration of oxygen in a gas, a metallic oxide semiconductor such as WO.sub.3 is normally used as a detecting element. When a voltage is applied to the metallic oxide semiconductor, electrons are thermally emitted from the detecting element to cause an increase in a temperature. According to the aforementioned principle, a degree of oxygen concentration in an exhaust gas is detected based on a temperature change of the detecting element. The detecting element is normally constructed by laminating a ceramic insulating member containing an electrically conductive heat generating member such as a lead or a bimetallic member comprising two lead members having different coefficients of thermal expansion, which are attached to each other with a connecting member therebetween, such as a glass frit. However, even if a ceramic insulating member and a metallic oxide semiconductor are so arranged that an inner ceramic member adheres closely to an outer metallic oxide semiconductor layer, the metal portion of the metallic oxide semiconductor is diffused into the inner ceramic member. A thermal expansion coefficient of the ceramic insulating member is different from that of the lead. Consequently,
