Comparison of different methods for the detection of anti-heart antibodies in myocardial infarction. Anti-heart antibodies (AHAs) have been found in patients with systemic lupus erythematosus, rheumatoid arthritis, idiopathic thrombocytopenic purpura, and myocardial infarction. Enzyme-linked immunosorbent assay (ELISA) is widely used for anti-heart antibody detection. The aim of this study was to compare three different methods (ELISA, immunofluorescence, and radial immunodiffusion) for AHA detection in a series of patients with acute myocardial infarction. AHA prevalence rate was higher in the group of female patients, and there was a positive correlation between anemia and AHA. Our results suggest that measuring AHA in the serum of patients with acute myocardial infarction is useful for the prognostic value of the disease and that AHA detection by any of these methods is feasible. Fernando de Mendoza y Arteaga Fernando de Mendoza y Arteaga (1563, Parma, Parma, Italy – 5 January 1635, Valladolid, New Spain) was a Spanish Archbishop and the first bishop of the city of Puebla de los Ángeles. Life A son of Juan de Mendoza y Añorve, Count of Peñaflores, of an ancient and noble family of Castilian origin, Fernando was ordained a priest on 15 June 1585 in the Cathedral of Parma. In 1590 he was a bishop, when he was named bishop of Tlaxcala. On 2 August 1592 he became the Dean of the Cathedral of the Saviorese in Parma, a position he held until 1594. In 1594 he was named canon of the cathedral of the city and during this year he left Parma to go to Mexico, where he had the chance of persuading the Nueva España Viceroyalty to appoint him an apostolic vicar general of the newly founded provincias of Guadalajara y Tlaxcala. In 1598, as consecration to the archdiocese of Mexico
