Dream Machine is a story-driven game about a nerdy life form discovering his own kind of magic. Made in the spirit of great adventure games of old like The Secret of Monkey Island and Gabriel Knight 1&2, but enhanced with modern visuals and a more modern story, this is one game you'll want to play more than once. Combine the humor, puzzles, and tension that make classic adventure games great with the style and atmosphere of a new-era The Walking Dead. Key Features: • Confusing, deeply engaging story with great voice-overs and lots of black humour. • Original characters with memorable quirks and witty dialogue. • A captivating world with secrets and mysteries to be uncovered. • Procedurally generated dungeons. • Highly replayable gameplay, with different endings and layouts for every playthrough. • Original music and sound-effects designed to enhance the atmosphere. Key Selling Points: - It's the best adventure game I've played in the last decade. - Created with the same level of care and attention to detail that's gone into The Walking Dead comics and TV show. - The puzzles are easy to solve but unique and compelling. - The writing has a unique mix of sharp humour and insightful observations. - The atmosphere and visuals were carefully crafted to enhance the gameplay. - The game's scope is ambitious and covers a lot of ground in just 2 short hours. - It's the first game I've played that has a genuinely original and emotional storyline. - Even though the characters are based on real people, they all have their own personality and quirks. This game was made using Game Maker, and it features a full option to switch between English, German, French, Spanish, Italian, and Dutch in the options menu. The Dream Machine: Chapter 3 is actually the third part of The Dream Machine series. It was announced at E3 2014 that day. I think it was back in 2013 at The Game Awards. Very little information was available other than a short video that was taken from the demo. One of the developers (Andrew) gave a podcast interview where he described the game a little further and who it was made by (woot woot). Set in 1950s England, and released on May 15th, 2017. The Dream Machine: Chapter 3 stars Robbie Cotton, the protagonist from The Dream Machine, in an adventure that takes place in the past (the 1950s), with a new character, Imaginarius. Imaginarius is an aspiring writer, searching for his dreams that are lost in a dream world, with an old game console that has no games at all, but it has a connection to an imagination machine that supposedly can help him find his dreams. Chapter 3 is extremely short. It may take you a few minutes to complete the first part of the game, to progress into chapter 3. The back story might not be interesting, but there are some amazing cut scenes and voice over acting. I really like how the characters talk. They don't say "yep" and "nope" and "uhuh" to everything the player says. It's actually a compliment to the characters' patience. They don't just say "yep" like we do in real life. They explain their feelings, or take the time to explain what they're doing. It's a nice touch that I don't remember seeing in other games. All the cutscenes are well made. The high-quality voice acting is an added bonus. The soundtrack really helps the game as well. It's not just a good remix of the soundtrack from the original game, or a recreation of it. The new story is creative enough to stand alone as a good song-to-video. The gameplay itself is similar to the first two installments. There are 6 main areas that you must complete to complete the game. While the gameplay is similar, it's not as repetitive as the first two parts were. The puzzles are probably the most creative ones I've played in a while. So while the game is short, it can be extremely difficult. It would probably take me about 20 minutes of gameplay to finish the first area. But after that, the gameplay gets a lot easier. About 20 minutes?

What's new in The Dream Machine: Chapter 3:

Announce 2013 Training Camp Roster The Oklahoma City Thunder today announced its initial training camp roster, which is subject to change due to the participation of International players and NBA Draft considerations. The Thunder will present their full training camp roster on Monday, July 30. The Thunder roster includes nine players returning from last season, followed by the addition of 10 new players. Thunder President and General Manager Sam Presti announced the initial roster by saying: "With Russ (Westbrook), Anthony (Davis) and Serge (Monroe) joining the team for training camp, it was important to us to give minutes equally to all of these exciting newcomers. The result is this group is an interesting mix of veteran leadership and young talent and the roster we have today will be a good representation of the young talent we have in Oklahoma City. First and foremost, I am very excited about our training camp and look forward to our introduction to everyone in the coming days." Upon his return to the Thunder franchise last season after playing in Europe for the last two seasons, reserve guard Jeremy Lamb (from Westchester, N.Y.), who had played his entire career in the NBA for the Los Angeles Clippers before being traded to the Oklahoma City Thunder prior to the 2010-11 season, will participate in training camp as a candidate to make the roster. The Thunder claimed the rights to Lamb from the Los Angeles Clippers on February 24, 2012. The Thunder coaching staff, led by Presti, head coach Scott Brooks and assistant coaches Jamaal Tinsley and Nate Tibbetts, will hold practice sessions on July 13-14 and July 16-17 at the team's Training Facility in Oklahoma City. Media availability will take place on Saturday, July 19 and Monday, July 21, during which the Thunder's full training camp roster will be revealed. 2013 Training Camp Roster 20 Kevin Durant, G, 6-10, Detroit, Senior 21 Kendrick Perkins, F/C, 6-11, Ohio State, Junior 12 Russell Westbrook, G, 6-3, UCLA, Junior 10 Steven Adams, F, 6-11, Pittsburgh, Sophomore 9 Patrick Beverly, G, 5-11, Michigan State, Junior 23 James Anderson, F, 6-6, Richmond, Sophomore 24 Ramon Sessions, G, 6-0, Iowa State, Senior 8 Derek Fisher, G, 6-1, North Carolina, Senior
