What's new:

Bizarre Barber Soundtrack is the debut solo album by the German hard rock singer Doro Pesch. It is the only solo album by Doro Pesch apart from the duo Doro & B.C.C. and Doros-Deutschland founded with Bernhard Conrads. Background Ralf Richter from rock magazine Scream Magazine, two years before Doro Pesch was even considered as an artist, had already written an article on Doro. Although Doro and Ralf did not get along at first, she was quite taken by his work. At that time, Quorthon from Bathory was also a contender for a guest-position. The phrase "Barber sound" was first used in the cover-design. While Quorthon was still alive, in his days as King Diamond, he did not like the sound of the combo. And because Quorthon did not name Doro as a possible candidate in his place, he tried to block Doro from the German market. However, Doro Pesch somehow arrived at him. And Quorthon loved the result of this meeting and decided to support her on the spot. The album was recorded at the old Studio Safari, a small studio in a former watermill. Doro and Bernhard Conrads (as he is known to his friends) had bought the studio and installed their own sound equipment. Apart from this, the huge rain-water-system had to be fixed. They had two days in which they recorded the songs. Doro Pesch had never done anything like that before. Such events were soon solved against the will of the artists if they came to pass. With help from personnel, some of the preparations for the recording were on a rescue basis. Once Doro Pesch received her material, she had two days to record the songs. Then she came up with a very emotional performance. Reception The manager of Knaben-Sound-GmbH / Heister-Disco-GmbH decided to publish this record, however, without Doro's contact. He also did not inform Doro Pesch that he was publishing her record. Apart from this, Doro was not prepared for the release of the record. But the record - unlike all other Doro Pesch albums - was successful on the market. The original version of the album included 12 songs which were never published. To date,
