Hanging out around the work is a very important part of an entrepreneur's life. Co-founder and CEO of LocalBits, a digital payments startup, Nico Casalotti, shared with me some tips about how to prepare more productive meetings with co-founders, or any co-worker that has a lot of potential that needs to be pushed in the right direction. Meetings: Co-founder Watch the video What is a good meeting? There's no single answer to this question because good meetings are different from one company to another. And there are a number of "musts" a good meeting should obey. After discussing several times, I have come to the conclusion that the key ingredients of a good meeting are: (1) On a given topic and for an efficient conversation, every team member should know what he or she is talking about, or at least what is the main topic of the meeting. (2) It is good to mix physical and virtual meetings, as I mentioned on my article about "Co-founder meetings in the age of the digital world". As long as you are on the same virtual space, you will be able to make better decisions because there is no time pressure, no physical limitation and you can take more time to explain ideas. Also, there will be less noise, distractions and interruptions. (3) It is also important to schedule the meeting well, in advance. It gives everyone enough time to prepare material and prepare for the conversation. (4) Be mindful of the language you use in the meeting. Think about what is appropriate for the different meetings we have. For example, if you want to discuss an idea, do not talk about "that idea". You may have a "project idea", a "product idea", a "new feature" or a "new product". This also implies that your brain will need some time to understand your words before you can explain it to the person in front of you. (5) Think about topics that you find interesting but are not part of the day-to-day work. As part of the preparation of the meeting, be able to explain to your co-founder why a given topic is interesting to you. Meetings: Product Manager Watch the video What is a good meeting? Utility of the mood component of the bipolar personality questionnaire in detecting bipolar disorder. To examine the utility of the bipolar personality questionnaire (BPQ) in detecting bipolar disorder. The BPQ was completed by 401 university students (mean age=21.8+/-3.7 years) and further administered in a psychiatric diagnostic interview. Sensitivity, specificity and the receiver operating characteristic (ROC) curve were used to evaluate the effectiveness of the BPQ in detecting bipolar disorder. The BPQ showed satisfactory correlation with bipolar disorder, with sensitivity of 74%, specificity of 60%, and the ROC curve area of 0.71. Subjects who received a diagnosis of bipolar I disorder exhibited higher BPQ scores than those who received a diagnosis of bipolar II disorder (PQ: Can the ethereum blockchain be replicated to a different node? If I have a single node for my ethereum network, can I replicate the blockchain to another node? Or is this bad practice? A: I'm not sure if this was your question, but I'm going to reply anyway. Short answer, yes, you can use a different node in the same network. Long Answer If you are using a testnet for the genesis block, then it is technically possible, as they are all on the same genesis block. However, if you are using a mainnet, then you are violating the core rules of what an Ethereum network is. So the answer would be no. From my understanding of the Ethereum network and when it is used, you have a main blockchain in place, and the testnet is used as a showcase. Some people use the mainnet without the testnet, and it is considered a bad practice by others. There are multiple reasons for this, which include: You would be missing out on the additional security measures implemented on testnet, as they are separate from mainnet. If you are using a private blockchain (no public or external node), then you would need to provide a way for the nodes to sync to each other and keep the network synchronized. With mainnet having a blockchain in place, a blockchain with a separate genesis block to mainnet would not be able to do that. .
