To create all of the 3D models used in the game, we collaborated with the fantastic indie game developer Eleven Thirteen Studios, known for their whimsical puzzle games like The Bridge and The Eye, which they created in their basement with very little funding, free time or interest. They developed the 3D files for both the bust and the skin panels from first-person sketches and photos, including several new features that make the models look a lot better than we could have done otherwise, like the ability to rotate around an axis. As for Sculpting and Rendering, we also developed a more robust feature that lets you enter and manipulate 3D files and take snapshots of them at different angles, just like you can with Photoshop. Although we're really proud of the assets in Unity, the game engine, we had to implement those new features in Blender to get things to work right for the unique needs of the game. As you can see on the screen above, Blender is a weird monster that, with very little effort, let's you create a high-quality, scalable model in three dimensions that's cross-platform compatible, so you can play it anywhere, and, more importantly, anyone can play it. We learned a lot from creating Sculpting and Rendering, including that Unity and Blender are very different when it comes to the way they deal with textures and materials, so we ended up building a more robust toolbox of features that's much more robust and deeper than we'd have been able to build on our own in time and money. In fact, we're so confident that you can't replicate our results in Unity with Blender that we offer the ability to download and play the entire game for free and support it, unlike most developers who don't even bother to release a trial version because there's no way to test and iterate their work.

Arctometric measurements of energy expenditure during walking in children with spastic cerebral palsy. Energy expenditure and biomechanical parameters were measured during standardized treadmill walking in six ambulant children and adolescents (8-16 years) with moderate to severe spastic cerebral palsy. The results were compared with those in a normal control group (N = 6). Despite the muscle spasticity, the children with cerebral palsy walked within the range of normal healthy children with an average walking speed of 1.24 m/s and a stride length of 1.18 m.

Six Degrees of Damnation is a top-down, first-person perspective, dark survival horror game that follows the story of protagonist Tim Torok. You wake up in a mysterious maze of a sewer with little more than a flashlight to ward of dangerous creatures and find out that there's more to the dungeon than you've bargained for. If you find yourself in this state of the land, and upon entry, you find yourself trapped in a place that is cursed with creatures of the night, what will you do? Will you try to survive, or will you give up? About the Publisher: Dovetail Games is a small, indie-focused game studio based in Liverpool, UK. Originally created in 2013, Dovetail Games has recently released Two Point Hospital, a dark, sinister and genuinely brilliant board game. Genre Indie Game Information Here at the Aamundsen we consider ourselves to be absolute perfectionists. Not only do we provide the best customer service you will ever experience, but we also go over every detail for every game to ensure it meets your expectations. At the same time, we don't dumb down the games we publish for our customers. We make the games that we would enjoy as a gamer. Having previously released a Wii U version of our games, we realize that the platform has been getting a bit of a bad rep recently for its inability to properly handle HD games. This has primarily been due to the lack of 3rd party publishers supporting the platform, and actually making the games that you'd expect from a HD console. So in 2015, we shifted our focus back to the PC platform, specifically the Windows platform. We absolutely love the PC platform, and have already had some amazing games come out for it. Currently, we are working on two big titles. The first, is Six Degrees of Damnation, a randomly generated survival horror game. The second, is AIDA Racing, a high quality car racing game that we've worked on for the past 2 years. The Aamundsen will be supporting both the PC and Wii U, and we thank you for your patience as we work on these titles. #### What's new in Goodbye Deponia:

Too rare for beyond a release on cassette (a high point of the movement of 99' sounds and sounds of the time), the acclaimed soundtrack of the Dutch rock 'n' roll band, 'Ze Call' has been finally released on an audiophile vinyl 2-record format. In addition to the original recordings of the main band, the LP contains extracts of audience recordings from live performances of the band in many clubs. The concept of a 'Ze Call Soundtrack' had, together with the label 100dB, been developed in collaboration with the Dutch promoter and radio producer, Pietus Nihardus. A portion of the sources are still used by Pietus Nihardus today. The unique availability on vinyl means that it is relatively difficult to find, so the impact in the audio department is extreme at this moment. Additionally, the Soundtrack includes an interview with the band, an insight into the recording of the album and a biographical programme about the band. Extracts from audience recordings As this project contains in its first part of two vinyl records recordings from audience recordings of live performances of the band at various clubs, we will be able to distinguish the best performances of the band. This section of the LP holds (non-album) alternate versions of five tracks: 'All About You', 'Twins', 'Where Are You' and 'Ain't No God'. Some of the selections are certainly difficult to find. The promoter of famous lives clubs of the time, Pietus Nihardus, produced A wonderfully expanded version of the dialogue between Pietus Nihardus and the 'Ze Call' band in this live recordings. A variant that has for a long time been missing here, and of which we just recently discovered the original source. The music of the cult band has been recognised for many years as highly representative of its time. Sony Music was the only one with the necessary permission to reissue the entire Ze Call album on their own label. In 1990, the record label Dux included a large soundtrack with the Ze Call album on Jiji label from Japan at the time. With the Universal Music B.V. they published in 2011, the Ze Call album Soundtrack on Audio Fonogram of the Sponjaard legend. Ze Call: Although originally consisting of four members, the cult group Ze Call started with a group that included five members. The success that followed was rapid and critical, despite the fact that the fan camp was
